Part marketer, part philosopher, full-time builder of things on the internet.

I follow my curiosity until it turns into a blog post or a business.

If you like sharp ideas, unapologetic transparency, and the occasional reference to Jurassic Park... you'll feel right at home.

This site is my little corner of the web where I try to make interesting things and share what I've learned.

Builder. Writer. Thinker.

Hey — thanks for taking the time to read this.

If we haven't met, I'm Corey. I'm a minor league athlete, major league nerd. A strategist with a soft side. Calm on the outside, calculated on the inside.

If you've followed my work for any amount of time, you know I care deeply about clarity, craftsmanship, and conviction — whether I'm writing a blog post, launching a product, or working as an AI marketing consultant helping companies grow without selling their soul.

In another life, I'd be digging up dinosaur bones or pulling G's in an F-22. This life? I'm just trying to create useful things and reflect the kind of care and intentionality I believe God modeled in His creation.

At the core of everything I do is this belief:

Marketing something you built to solve a real problem is a service to the world.

So I work hard to make sure good ideas get the attention they deserve.

I write, build, and share consistently — because I believe learning in public is one of the most generous things you can do. And that's what this site is for.

“What if I launch a product that nobody wants to buy?”

Most of us, when we want to ship a product, we start at the beginning and with the most obvious ingredient: the product.

Because when you can create, the act of creating feels most natural and straightforward.

But it makes it so easy to end up with a product that nobody wants to buy.

And isn't that every new entrepreneur's worst nightmare? All that work, and nobody cares.

Failure. Not even dramatic failure — a flop, a fizzle.

A product that nobody wants to buy.

Let's press pause that horror scenario for a moment and consider the alternative
